Is Fined $100.

An echo of the Domingo Montoya indictment on a charge of assault on 14 year old Josephine Hernandez was heard in the corporation court Friday afternoon when Dionicia Morales and her daughter, Petra Morales, were tried on a charge of vagrancy. The defendants were each fined $190.

Josephine Hernandez was a witness in the case. She told of having run away from home at las Cruces with a young man. In El Paso she got employment in the home of an American woman, she declared. One day, on El Paso atreet, she met Dionicia Morales.

"She asked me to go home with her and I could make good money and have fine clothes," she stated. She told of meeting men at the home. "One day Petra Morales and I met Domingo Montoya and another man on the street. They asked us to ride in the automobile. We got in and were taken down the valley. We stopped at the White Heuse lim. I drank one glass of beer. Then we started hack. When we got about half way home the automobile was stopped beside the road and we got out. I was with Domingo Montoya. Shortly after we returned to EH Paso."

Stery Substantiated.

Petra Morales's testimony substantiated the story told by Josephina Hernandez. She stated that it was dark and she did not know what happened between Domingo Montoya and Josephina.

Dionicia Morales denied that she conducted a discorder in home.

New Yorkers Robbed Of Sixty Million Dollars Through Short Weights

New York, June 12-Sixty million

New York, June 12—Sixty million dollars annually is the tribute which the purchasing public of the city of New York pays to dishonest tradesmen. Despite the efforts of the state department of weights and measures and of the board of weights and measures of this city, experts have testified that this sum is pocketed each year by violators of the net container law. Addressing the Weights and Measures association of the state of New York, ex-assemblyman Franklin Brooks, author of the law, showed that a package of coffee was short in weight to a value of 2 cents, which paid for the cont of the box in which it was packed. According to local efficials, the trouble is not due to the provisions of the law, nor to the means employed for detecting violations, although inspectors and adequate appropriations for the work are lacking. The difficulty seems to be due to the fact that it is impossible to obtain convictions, or even prossentions under the law. Whom evidence of violations was submitted to the attorney general of the state, he declared that it was the place of the district attorney of the county to conduct the prosecution. The latter official thought that it should be taken up by the everperation connect of the district attorney of the county to conduct the prosecution. The latter official thought that it should be taken up to the externey of the actual to the atterney, but compromise put it in the attention of the public has been called to existing conditions. It is believed that more stringent measures will be taken to prevent the public from heing robbed of such an enormous sum annually,

Real Estate Man-

Eight years ago two friends arrived in El Paso. One bought a home on terms. The other thought himself too "wise" to fall for the real estate man's game and he is still pay-

The first man paid $35 per month on his home including interest and about $3.00 per month insurance and taxes.

The second man paid $25.00 per month rent and averaged at least $1.00 per month for moving.

The first man had his own garden, flowers and fruit.

The second had the inconvenience of moving about once a year, living in old houses, never knowing who his predecessors may have been or what diseases were lurking in the corners.

The first took a great interest in his home.

The second cared little about his temporary stopping place, and so spent little time with his family.

RESULT-After 8 years the first man has a deed to his home conservatively worth $3500.

The second man has about $2400 worth of worthless rent receipts.
